February 8, 2008 - Housing professionals from across the country and abroad will convene at the Orange County Convention Center in Orlando, Fla., Feb. 13-16 for the 2008 International Builders' Show (IBS), the housing industry's largest annual trade show and exhibition. The National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) event, held in one of the largest convention centers in the country, will feature the most cutting-edge designs, technologies, products and services in the industry.

More than 1,900 exhibitors will be on display across more than one million net square feet of exhibit space. Suppliers span more than 300 product categories ranging across every aspect of the residential and light commercial construction fields. Here are just some of the many exciting innovations that builders will see:

Building Accessories:

Millennium International Development Corporation will debut FLO n STOP™, a wireless remote-controlled water security system that allows homeowners to control the main water supply through a wireless transmitter on/off button pad that is set on or near the entry door to a dwelling. When pushed a signal will wirelessly make contact with the Solenoid Valve in the main water supply line and conveniently turn off all the water in the dwelling.
